Program Challenge Fund

Corporation for Public Broadcasting

The Program Challenge Fund was created in 1987 to support high profile; primetime limited series and specials for the national public television schedule. The Challenge Fund is jointly administered by CPB and PBS, which make funding decisions based on mutually established programming goals and objectives. In FY07, CPB and PBS are re-defining the purpose of the Program Challenge Fund in an effort to bring additional impact to the National Program Service schedule. The Program Challenge Fund will begin to more fully fund high-visibility, high-impact limited series and feature length documentaries that offer a definitive take on a subject or break new ground in popular, public service media. CPB and PBS expect a successful Program Challenge Fund program to be the highlight of a given season's schedule and have the potential to generate publicity. Furthermore, to address industry-wide goals for development of digital content, CPB and PBS will dedicate Program Challenge Fund dollars to high-definition or standard-definition widescreen programs only, and recipients will be expected to deliver all digital content with the underlying rights. Note: There is no standard application process for the Program Challenge Fund, and producers should submit projects according to the general CPB Recommended Submission Guidelines. Producers should also contact PBS. Only those projects deemed to meet the Challenge Fund priorities by CPB and PBS programming teams will be among the final projects considered for investment at the appropriate Program Challenge Fund meeting. Deadline for submission is December 3, 2009.

Surdna Foundation's Arts Program

Surdna Foundation

The Surdna Foundation's Arts program, which funds organizations that provide intensive art-making experiences for teens, is launching a new initiative in support of young creative writers. The foundation is seeking proposals from writers'/artists' colonies - artists' communities that serve creative writers - that have experience with or an interest in working with young people to develop a summer creative writing retreat program for teens. Participants will reside in the artists' communities and will be mentored by professional writers of national/international stature. All eligible artists' communities that have historically welcomed creative writers are encouraged to apply. The foundation hopes to provide young writers with opportunities for new resources, creation, solitude, and reflection similar to that offered to adult professionals who attend writers' colonies. Proposed projects must allow for at least twenty teens to be served per year, and all participants must be in residence for no less than two weeks. Only organizations with 501(c)(3) tax-exempt status and in operation as an artists' colony serving creative writers for a minimum of five years may apply. Grant size will depend on the scope of the project and the size of the organization. Applicants may apply for up to three years.

Preschool for California's Children

David and Lucile Packard Foundation

The goal of the Preschool for California's Children subprogram is to secure high-quality preschool opportunities for all three- and four-year-olds in the state by funding leadership and constituency-building, technical assistance and systems building, research, and public preschool programs in selected California communities. Foundation grantmaking seeks to:

- Expand and strengthen statewide advocacy efforts and engage a diverse cross-section of groups in support of preschool (including the business sector, organized labor, communities of color, and K-12 and early educators).
 - Support further research on topics related to ensuring preschool for California's children.

- Provide ongoing support to local flagship preschool efforts that demonstrate the promise of high-quality preschool when implemented on a large scale. This includes support for Affordable Buildings for Children's Development (ABCD) which seeks to create a system to attract private lending to build and rehabilitate child care facilities, including preschools.

The David and Lucile Packard Foundation is a private foundation. They accept grant proposals only for charitable, educational, or scientific purposes, primarily from tax-exempt, charitable organizations. They do not provide funding for projects that benefit specific individuals or that serve religious purposes. Letters of inquiry and proposals are reviewed year-round. Energy Foundation

The Energy Foundation

The Energy Foundation is a partnership of major donors in-interested in solving the world's energy problems. The foundation's mission is to advance energy efficiency and renewable energy - essential components of a clean energy future. The foundation's primary role is as a grantmaker, providing resources to the institutions that most effectively leverage change. The foundation also takes direct action, such as commissioning papers or convening meetings, to address unmet needs. The foundation's geographic focus is the United States and China, with special emphasis on regional initiatives. The foundation makes grants in the areas of Power, Building, Transportation, and Climate. Generally, the foundation makes grants to nonprofit charitable organizations classified as 501(c)(3) public charities. The foundation is unable to make grants directly to individuals, and is unable to support local projects, unless they have been consciously designed for further replication or have broad regional or national implications. The foundation is unable to fund the research and development of technology (e.g., funds to develop hybrid automobiles or commercialization of an invention). The foundation's Board of Directors meets three times a year (the first week of March, the third week of June, and the first week of November). The foundation accepts proposals on a continuous basis. There are no specific deadlines. For Kids Only

For Kids Only

For Kids Only seeks to fund programs with specific faith-based components focused on "at risk" children ages 0 to 12 that further our mission, have specific measurable spiritual and academic outcomes, and serve as a model in their local community. FKO funds programs across the United States. International programs are not funded, even if they are based in the US. Their definition of at-risk: At-risk children are children at a disadvantage academically, economically, socially, and/or spiritually. They consider a combination of these characteristics necessary for an application – not only one at-risk characteristic (i.e. spiritually only). This can include special needs, behaviorally challenged, poverty, abuse and neglect, failing school performance, etc. Deadline is January 6, 2010.

Consumer Wellness Nutritional Grant Program

Consumer Wellness

Consumer Wellness is ready and willing to assist individual, motivated, and caring schoolteachers, administrators, and program facilitators by funding their own creative visions of nutritional education and sharing. Submit a formal written proposal on official school or foundation letterhead and explain in detail:

- Your organization, your position and qualifications
- What aspect of nutritional education you envision teaching
- Your target group: number, approximate ages, and geographic location
- Where and how the money will be spent
- What impact you hope to have
- Your commitment to proactively report to the Consumer Wellness Center at least 3 times via written correspondence and digital photographs detailing your experience and the impact of your teaching program at various phases

For instance, if you are a teacher and you observe your class of 3rd graders eating lunches devoid of fresh veggies and fruits, you might arrange a field trip to a farm: maybe an organic farm, where your students will have the opportunity to experience how foods are grown, picked, and made available for purchase. If you administer a prenatal care clinic or educate expectant mothers, you might teach the how's and why's of holistic food preparation. You might even want to demonstrate what whole foods are and how to prepare nutrient dense and delicious meals. Deadline for submission is November 23, 2009.

National Institutes of Health

Metals in Medicine

Funding Opportunity Number: PA-08-251

There are several types of eligible applicants. Please refer to the full announcement for further details.

The objective of this Funding Opportunity Announcement (FOA), issued by the National Institute of General Medical Sciences (NIGMS), National Cancer Institute (NCI), National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences (NIEHS), and the Office of Dietary Supplements (ODS), National Institutes of Health is to encourage research that bridges the areas of inorganic chemistry and medicine. The mechanisms by which organisms control transition metal ions and the roles of these metals in cellular regulation and signaling in health and disease are of principal interest. The interactions of synthetic inorganic complexes with living systems and their components are an additional area of interest. These areas are linked by the need to involve researchers having a deep understanding of inorganic chemistry in medically relevant research. Much of the work is expected to involve collaborations including chemists, biologists, and medical researchers. The results will be relevant to understanding the mechanisms of metal handling by biological systems and the basic cellular roles underlying the nutritional requirement for essential metals. It is expected that this research will also contribute to the identification of new targets for drug discovery, diagnostics, and future therapeutic approaches involving metal complexes, although drug development, per se, is not a focus of the program. Deadline is September 7, 2011.

Research Supplements to Promote Diversity in Health-Related Research

Funding Opportunity Number: PA-08-190

There are several types of eligible applicants. Please refer to the full announcement for further details.

The National Institutes of Health (NIH) and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) hereby notify Principal Investigators holding specific types of NIH research grants, listed in the full Funding Opportunity Announcement (FOA) that funds are available for administrative supplements to improve the diversity of the research workforce by supporting and recruiting students, postdoctorates, and eligible investigators from groups that have been shown to be underrepresented. Although the administrative supplements supported under this program provide funding for less than one percent of all individuals involved in NIH supported research, the NIH has found these awards to be an effective means of encouraging institutions to recruit from currently underrepresented groups. Administrative supplements must support work within the scope of the original project. Deadline is September 29, 2011.

California Endowment

The California Endowment

The California Endowment awards grants to organizations which support our mission and whose applications are focused on one of the three goals. Your application must identify a single goal for your request. Your proposal should explain how your project or activity will support the selected goal and what the impact will be of the proposed project or activity in your organization or community. Access to health can be achieved through a strong system of primary, preventive health services that are responsive to community needs, coupled with a comprehensive system of health coverage that is simple, affordable and available to all Californians. Applications are accepted any time through the year. Under this goal they fund proposals that are designed to expand health coverage, simplify enrollment in health programs and improve the effectiveness of health systems. The goal focuses on policy changes at the local, regional and state levels and seeks lasting reforms and improvements in the way health and mental health services are delivered. The focus also aims to expand access to comprehensive health services that demonstrate better health outcomes and utilize preventive services to maintain health. Examples of proposals eligible for funding include: supporting a capacity building project that will enable a small community clinic or health organization to more effectively provide health services, developing new models of care focusing on prevention and effective coordination of health and mental health services, or building a coalition across public and private sectors to expand access to health services for all Californians.

Micromeritics Instrument Grant Program

Micromeritics

Micromeritics has recently launched an Instrument Grant Program intended to provide particle characterization instruments to non-profit universities and research organizations for the purpose of fostering and supporting meritorious research projects. Micromeritics is now accepting applications for its newly instituted Instrument Grant Program. Researchers at non-profit universities and institutions will now have the opportunity to acquire the use of expensive particle characterization instrumentation not generally available through other means. Types of instrumentation that will qualify as Donated Equipment include particle size analyzers, gas adsorption analyzers, mercury porosimeters, gas pycnometers, and chemisorption instrumentation. Since the nature and scope of the instruments that may be requested will vary, it is anticipated that the value of awards will vary also. Major recipients of a Program Grant of the Donated Equipment may include individual researchers or a group of researchers within the same department or from several departments at one institution. In addition, the Donated Equipment may be donated for shared use by two or more institutions provided that the grant application demonstrates the feasibility of such shared use. Deadline is March 31, 2010.

Charles Lafitte Foundation

The Charles Lafitte Foundation

The Charles Lafitte Foundation is a private family foundation founded in 1999 by Suzanne and Jeffrey Citron. The Foundation is committed to helping groups and individuals foster lasting improvement on the human condition by providing support to education, children's advocacy, medical research and the arts.

Education

- The mission of the Education Program is to encourage the attainment of knowledge and skills and the practice of responsible citizenship through access to effective learning opportunities. The Foundation provides support for innovative programs aimed at resolving social service issues, assisting students with learning disabilities, providing technology and computer based education, creating access to education of the arts, supporting at-risk children from pre-school to college and providing learning enhancement, including the development of leadership skills. The Education Program includes support for research and conferences as well as support for programs that promote academic excellence in institutions of higher learning.

Children

- The Foundation is committed to improving the "quality of life" of children by supporting programs, which encourage children to reach their fullest potential. The best chance a child has to reach that goal is to be provided with sufficient education, health care, housing and love. To that end, the Foundation supports programs that deal with issues such as child abuse, foster housing, literacy, educational advancement, after-school programs, hunger projects and the general well-being of children. The mission of the Children's Advocacy Program is to improve outcomes for children and youth of all ages and to maintain a vital, attractive community where children and families can thrive.

Medical Issues

- The mission of the Medical Issues and Research Program is to raise the quality of healthcare by supporting and encouraging health research and education. The Foundation supports innovative programs, research that promotes health, scientific and educational activities and disease prevention. The Foundation supports efforts that help people live healthy and productive lives and assists specific groups with serious and neglected problems. Emphasis is given to cancer research and treatment, children's health, health education, promoting healthy life styles and bettering the quality of life for patients.

The Arts

- The mission of the Arts Program is to foster the growth of new artists, invest in established artists and expand access to the arts. As one of the primary outlets of human creativity, art is a vital resource in developing and maintaining healthy communities. As school budgets are often short on cultural opportunities, the foundation will favor educational programs that encourage students to release their creativity, inspire them to learn and empower them with achievement. The Foundation supports innovation and creativity in the arts, and is particularly interested in encouraging emerging artists and inspiring the development of new artistic work.

There is no application deadline. Applying organizations must be 501(c)3.

RGK Foundation

RGK Foundation

RGK Foundation awards grants in the broad areas of Education, Community, and Medicine/Health. The Foundation's primary interests within Education include programs that focus on formal K-12 education (particularly mathematics, science and reading), teacher development, literacy, and higher education. Within Community, the Foundation supports a broad range of human services, community improvement, abuse prevention, and youth development programs. Human service programs of particular interest to the Foundation include children and family services, early childhood development, and parenting education. The Foundation supports a variety of Community Improvement programs including those that enhance non-profit management and promote philanthropy and voluntarism. Youth development programs supported by the Foundation typically include after-school educational enrichment programs that supplement and enhance formal education systems to increase the chances for successful outcomes in school and life. The Foundation is also interested in programs that attract female and minority students into the fields of mathematics, science, and technology. The Foundation's current interests in the area of Medicine/Health include programs that promote the health and well-being of children, programs that promote access to health services, and Foundation-initiated programs focusing on ALS. Although there are no geographic restrictions to the Foundation's grantmaking program, the Foundation no longer accepts unsolicited requests for international agencies or programs. While the Foundation occasionally awards grants for operating expenses, capital campaigns, endowments, and international projects, such grants are infrequent and usually initiated by the Foundation. Multiyear grants are rare; most grants are awarded for a one-year period. RGK Foundation no longer accepts unsolicited grant proposals. All applicants must complete an electronic letter of inquiry from the website as the first step. There is no deadline for submitting the letter of inquiry. Grants are made only to nonprofit organizations certified as tax exempt under Sections 501(c)(3) or 170(c) of the Internal Revenue Code and are classified as "not a private foundation" under Section 509(a). Hospitals, educational institutions, and governmental institutions meeting these requirements are eligible to apply. Organizations that have completed and filed Form 1023 but not yet received an IRS determination letter are not eligible to apply. The Foundation does not make grants or loans to individuals.

RESEARCH

National Institutes of Health

Pathway to Independence Award in Cancer Nanotechnology Research

Funding Opportunity Number: RFA-CA-09-015

There are several types of eligible applicants. Please refer to the full announcement for further information. This Funding Opportunity Announcement (FOA), issued by the National Cancer Institute (NCI), National Institutes of Health (NIH), solicits applications for the Pathway to Independence Award (K99/R00) in Cancer Nanotechnology Research. This initiative is an integral component of a broader program to continue the interactive NCI Alliance for Nanotechnology in Cancer (the Alliance) (<http://nano.cancer.gov>). In addition to this initiative, the Alliance will consist of the Center for Nanotechnology Excellence (CCNEs, as a core of the program infrastructure), platform projects (CNPPs), and Cancer Nanotechnology Training Centers (CNTCs). The primary purpose of this Pathway to Independence Award Program is to increase and maintain a strong cohort of new talented investigators focused on research in cancer nanotechnology. The program is designed to facilitate a timely transition from a mentored postdoctoral research position to a stable independent research position with independent research support at an earlier stage than is currently the norm. Deadline for submission is December 17, 2009.

Sandler Program for Asthma Research

The Sandler Program for Asthma Research

The Sandler Program for Asthma Research seeks highly original thinking from investigators willing to step away from their current areas of research and tackle the riddle of asthma. Prior research in asthma is not required. Investigators within the field are eligible for awards, but they must demonstrate that their proposed work represents a departure from their current and past research. Because the program seeks to develop new paths in asthma research, innovation and risk are strongly encouraged. The program supports basic research at two levels: the Senior Investigator Award provides $250,000 per year for three years; and the Early Excellence Award provides $150,000 per year for three years. Senior Investigators will have well-established research programs and an international reputation for their research. They will usually hold a full-time academic appointment as Professor, Associate Professor, or the equivalent. Early Excellence Awards are given to investigators who have already established an independent research program. They will usually hold a full-time academic appointment as an Assistant Professor, early Associate Professor, or the equivalent, and will have national-level, independent funding. The number of awards given each year is not fixed, and the proportion of Senior Investigator and Early Excellence Awards may vary. Awards are available to investigators in the U.S. and Canada. Deadline for submission is February 4, 2010.

National Institutes of Health

Silvio O. Conte Centers for Basic and Translational Mental Health Research

Funding Opportunity Number: PAR-08-194

There are several types of eligible applicants. Please refer to the full announcement for further details.

The National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) invites applications for Silvio O. Conte Centers for Basic and Translational Mental Health Research. The institute seeks teams of researchers working at different levels of analysis and engaging in integrative, novel, and creative experimental approaches to address high-risk, high-impact questions with the primary objective of:

- Advancing the state of the science in brain and behavior research relevant to mental health;
- Supporting the integration and translation of basic and clinical neuroscience research on severe mental illnesses; and/or
- Advancing our understanding of the neurobehavioral developmental mechanisms responsible for psychopathology [or mental disorders] in childhood and adolescence.

The Conte Centers program is intended to support research demonstrating an extraordinary level of synergy, integration, and potential for advancing the state of the field; this program is intended only for projects that could not be achieved by using other, more standard grant mechanisms. The Conte Centers program also provides an opportunity to establish interdisciplinary and/or translational research experiences for individuals in pre- and postdoctoral training. Deadline for submission is September 23, 2010.

American Architectural Foundation

The American Architectural Foundation

The American Architectural Foundation, in partnership with KnowledgeWorks Foundation, invites nominations for the Richard Riley Award - Schools as Centers of Community: A National Search for Excellence. The award is named in honor of former U.S. Secretary of Education Richard Riley, one of the first champions of schools as centers of community. The prize is awarded to a school that best demonstrates school design that supports the community. The award program is open to all existing elementary and secondary public schools in the United States that serve as centers of community, demonstrate innovative design ideas, and help promote student achievement. The school can be recently constructed, opened, or renovated, and does not have to be new. Nominations can be submitted by teachers, superintendents, students, principals, school business officials, board members, architects, or anyone who cares about a school in their local community. Schools can nominate themselves. A $5,000 prize will be awarded to the winning school. Deadline for submission is December 1, 2009.

American Association of Physics Teachers

American Association of Physics Teachers

It is the goal of the AAPT to encourage high school teachers to experiment and improve on their teaching practices. It is our belief that as teaching practice improves, then physics enrollment and excitement among students increase. As a result, we offer the High School Physics Teacher Grant. We hope that this grant can provide the funds to kick start the implementation of these practices. The grant(s) are given each year to teachers whose proposal meets the goal of the grant. That is, the procedure should result in better teaching practice, student understanding and interest, and/or increased enrollment. Also, the proposal should contain some innovative ideas. For example, the proposal may use a new teaching method or an adaptation of an existing idea. Deadline for application submittal is December 1, 2009.

SOCIAL JUSTICE

Norman Foundation

The Norman Foundation

The Norman Foundation supports efforts that strengthen the ability of communities to determine their own economic, environmental and social well-being, and that help people control those forces that affect their lives. These efforts may:

- Promote economic justice and development through community organizing;
 - Work to prevent the disposal of toxics in communities, and to link environmental issues with economic and social justice;

- Promote civil rights by fighting discrimination and working for equity. Our current priority for Civil Rights grant-making is public education equity, with an emphasis on parent and youth organizing.
 - They consider the following in evaluating grant proposals:
 - Does the project arise from the hopes and efforts of those whose survival, well-being and liberation are directly at stake?
 - Does it further ethnic, gender and other forms of equity?
 - Is it rooted in organized, practical undertakings?
 - Is it likely to achieve systemic change?
 - In pursuing systemic change, they hope that:
 - The proposed action may serve as a model;
 - The spread of the model may create institutions that can survive on their own;
 - Their establishment and success may generate beneficial adaptations by other political, social and economic institutions and structures.
 - The Foundation provides grants for general support, projects, and collaborative efforts. They also welcome innovative proposals designed to build the capacity of social change organizations working in our areas of interest. Priority is given to organizations with annual budgets of under $1 million. Application deadline is December 1, 2009.
